The Baron, who is a banker, is a 'member of tis' very smartest society, as well as of the most exclusive clubs, and has achieved that most difficult of all things, namely to get himself accepted by the best English society as one of themselves in spite of his being a foreigner.

His stables are among the best ordered in London, and so constructed that they can be visited at any moment from his house in Wilton street, by a passage leading directly from the dining-room. The Bargon once had an unpleasant experience with this house. Returning unexpectedly from his country seat in Germany, he found his London home occupied by a party of Americans, to whom his unfaithful butter had leased it—furnished cellar and stables included. Since then, no male attendant has even been tolerated in the Haron's house, and butter, froom of the chamber and footman are all members of the fair sex.

bert Kitchener appear to have been rendering themselves guilty of one of those breaches of tact and courtesy which have contributed so much to damage they-popularity of British rule in Egypt and to destroy in the minds both of the Khedlve'and of his people any feeling of gratitude for all those benefits, financial, administrative and moral, which have been conferred upon them by their English protectors and self-imposed friends.

Thus, the other day, as soon as ever the news of Sir Herhert's victory over the news of Sir Herhert's victory over the dervishes at Ferke became known. Queen Victoria at once sent a dispatch congratulating the troops on their victory. This message was published by Sir Herbert in his order of the day and read out on parade to the troops, who received it "at the present" and with every demonstration of military honerand respect. Moreover, Sir Herbert sent a reply to the queen, conveying the "humble thanks" of the forces for "Your Majesty's most gracious message."

Simultaneously with the dispatch from the queen Sir Herbert received an equally appreciative telegram from the young Khedive, congratulating both him and the troops on the victory. Yet. Sir Herbert took no notice of this message and abstained from communicating it to the army. Nor did he even take the trouble to acknowledge it in any way until a full week later, when in response to an inquiry from Cairo as to whether he had received the telegram from his Highness, he sent a brief dispatch to the Khedive, thanking him in the curtest possible fashion for his "amiable message."

Now, it must be borne in mind that none but Egyptian troops took part in the curtest possible fashion for his "amiable message."

Now, it must be borne in mind that none but Egyptian troops took part in the ongagement at Ferket; that Sir Herbert is employed, not by the queen, but by the Khedive, who pays him close upon $20,000 per annum for looking after his army. Moreover, the handful of English officers engaged in the fight were every one of them wearing est Many People. From the Buffalo Evening News: If you were to call at 27 Front avenue you would find a pleasant elderly lady. Mrs. Captain Henesy by name, whose busband has halled the lakes for many a year, and when in port makes his home in Buffalo, N. Y. Her kindly smile and joyous manner are to no small extent due to the escape she has had. Her own words can better de-scribe her rescue and one can easily understand her presnt happy condition when they realize what she has gone through. She says: "About five months ago I had an attack of sickness which lasted for a week and since that time I have been subject at intervals to similar attacks, some which were longer in duration. It is hard for me to describe how I suffered. The pain would commence in my head, ufter which it would seem to pass down my body and settle in my back, my sides ached, my back ached, and I had a feeling of great distress in my bowels. a feeling of great distress in my bowels.

The increased pain which seemed to core from lying down, would be almost unbearble, my face and stomach would bloat up and I could hardly stand on my feet, dizzlness made it almost impossible; this feeling was always with me even after the violence of the attack passed over. The last attack I had was the worst, and was so bad I would not have have been able to tell this story but for Doan's Kidney Pills, As soon as I commenced their use I found immediate relief. The pain in my back and skies left me and the dizzlness went with it; the bloating in my face and body disappeared and all distress in my bowels was gone. I have great faith in Doan's Kidney Pills; in a short time they did a great deal more for me than all tee plasters and medicines which I had resorted to in seeking relief and cure. I hope always to be able to procure them."

of English officers engaged in the fight were every one of them wearing the cloth of the Khedive, and in receipt of his handsome pay.

Under the circumstances Sir Herbert's breach of courtesy and tact in this matter is simply unpardonable, and can only be ascribed to the bitterness which he still harbors against young Abbas for having presumed at a review held two years no at Assonan to criticize the marching of one of his own Expylian regiments. His criticism merited and wild though it was, called forth such a display of temper then and there on the part of Sir Herbert, who regarded it as a reflection on the leachings of his officers, as to necessitate the intervention of Lord Cromer, who compelled Kitchener to apologize, the Khedive at the same time issuing a general order expressing his appreciation of the services rendered by the English officers in his employ.

Lord Cadogan, whose favorite and most popular daughter, Lady Sophia, has just become the wife of young Sir-Samuel Scott, the intimate friend and crony of the young Duke of Marlborough, is a man whose vast fortunels of altogether modern creation. Indeed, at the time of his birth, in the same year as the Prince of Wales, there was no idea that he would develop into one of the wealthest of the multi-millionaire ground landlords of the metropolis. Up to that time, indeed, the Earls of Cadogan were looked upon as rather poor nobles, and what land they did own in London congisted chiefly of slums, most of them of a distinctly disreputable character. Much of this land was not built upon at all, and in the very center of Upper Chelsen, where the ultra-fashionable Cadogan Square now stands, was the large cricket ground known as "Princes."

The unfavorable influences which had dominated yesterday's stock market were again operative-to-day and the speculation was feverish, on a decided increase in the volume of business. The Grangers. Industrials, Coalers and Vanderbilts were foremost in the dealings, and after an almost uninterrupted decline in the general market leading to breaks of 164 per cent in the leading active shares, recoveries were generally made in the last hour, bringing prices up to about the opening figures. The depressing factors included Mr. Vanderbilt's illness, the decreasing government gold reserve, further weakness in government bonds, increased strength in the foreign exchange rates and estimates of aggregate engage. ments of gold for Saturday's and Tuesday's of next week's steamers, ranging from $3,090,000 to $4,500,000. There was no news bearing upon the general situation aside from the considerations above noted and the rally in the last hour was on extensive covering of shorts based on unverified rumors of the completion of a syndicate for the purpose of purchasing a $100,000,000 block of government bonds. There was also evidence of support at the extreme low points by powerful financial interests. Moderate buying of the leading international shares for foreign account was also noted. The market opened un-on sales of $1.568,000.

Governments were quiet and weak for the new is and 5s. Not losses in each case were slight after an early brenk of $1, per cent in the new 4s coupon to Silver certificates were slightly high-er on sales of $10,000 at 63%c.

fashionable Calogan Square now stands, was the large cricket ground known as "Princes."

It was only some time after his marriage to Lady Beatrice Craven, so renowned for her prowess in the hunting field, that the tide of fashion set in the direction of Chelsea, and that Lord Cadogan became aware of the opportunities within his grasp. Between the years of 1873-53, the so-called Chelsea reconstruction scheme was in full blast, and to-day the site of the former slums and cricket field is, occupied by street upon street and square upon square of the most costly and valuable houses and mansions in London. Moreover, much of this land was sold vacant on "ninety-nine year" leases, and has since been bulk upon, the houses becoming the property of the ground landloris on the expiration of the lease, the wealth of the Cadogan family being therefore bound to steadily increase in gigantic strides as time rolls by.

The Chelsea property, I may add, such as it was, came into the family through the marriage of the grandfather of the present Earl to the beiress of Sir Hans Sloane, the eminent physician and scientist, whose collections constituted the nucleus of what is now known as the British museum, Although the Cadogan peerage—that is to bany the present recation thereof-only dates from the time of the younger Pitt at the close of the last century, yet the lineage of the family is exceedingly ancient, it having been founded by a Welsh Prince of Fulys, who had a son named Cadogan. Jealous as are the English of their superiority and pre-eminence in all questions relating to horses, it is worthy of note that the Four-in-Hand and Coaching Clubs of London accord the palm in driving and in judging of roadsters not to a fellow countryman, but to a Prussian a Baron von Delehman, who, however, has spent so much of this time in England as to become well-nigh a Briton.
